It doesn't get any better than this...oh yes it does!By Jack NuseThanks to up-to-the-minute Internet websites, candidate sourcing information, and the progressive techniques contained in this latest of five editions of CAREERXROADS, we are confident that we will eclipse our average staffing performance metrics achieved over the past 5 years. These metrics (which were primarily attained in pharmaceutical, technology, training services, and staff augmentation environments) include: number-of-hires (75% were from the Internet), time-to-hire (48 days), cost-per-hire ($3,800), and customer satisfaction (89%). Free e-mail updates increase the value of this user-friendly candidate sourcing tool for the successful Internet recruiter.4 of 4 people found the following review helpful. So-So BookBy A CustomerI wasn't too impressed with the book. The best part about the book was that it was organized superbly, and the site information was very detailed. As far as the information goes, I came across maybe one or two sites I wasn't familiar with, but the rest are mainstream. I'm also confused who this book targets...the job seeker or the employer. I think this book is trying to do too much.1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. A helpful listingBy Wayne D. FordWhile it is not possible to publish a totally updated listing of this type (due to constant turnover), it is nevertheless a helpful listing of many of the major sites used by job seekers and recruiting entities. Put it on your bookshelf.Wayne D. Ford, Ph.D., author, "Breakthrough Technical Recruiting" docwifford@msn.com
