However when I received it and find that it doesn't not come with an actual CD, I was disappointed. It was my fault that I didn't read what it comes with carefully. I only based it on the pic of the cover that it comes with a CD.Reason for the low rating. My daughter wanted me to read it to her as soon as we received the book. But when we opened the book, she thought the characters looked scary (which kind of does). Since we didn't have the actual CD, I read it out loud to her and luckily I speak Chinese. My husband attempted to say the pinying part and he couldn't say it right.Both my husband and I agree that this book is very cheesy. After reading it several times to her, she learned 3 words all together and she kept loosing interest half way through the book0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. very simple way to learn!By AmandaWe love this series! Cant get enough of them! By Lucy on February 17, 2016 I teach French, German and Chinese to little children and have just discovered your books. I love them, as does my daughter. I currently have Beauty and the Beast German edition and it says level 4 and 5 coming soon. I was just wondering if that was still the case and when it would be, as we can't get enough of them! -- Verified PurchaseAbout the AuthorSLANGMAN DAVID BURKE Being brought up in a multi-lingual household, David Burke used his language skills as a tour guide at Universal Studios in Hollywood, California, giving tours in English, French, Italian, and sign language. His love of language inspired him to delve into the intricacies of words and led him to become a prominent author of more than 100 books on understanding slang and idioms in different languages, as well as books that teach kids foreign languages through fairy tales. His materials on slang and idioms are currently used as course curriculum by Berlitz International, UCLA, Harvard University, NYU and Hewlett Packard, and even by the writers of The Simpsons to give Bart his coolness. Having been trained since the age of four as a classical pianist, David became the in-house music director for the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee where he composed and scored documentaries, commercials, and public service announcements featuring top stars in Hollywood. In 1986, David founded Slangman Publishing which specializes in materials that teach children foreign languages, as well as products teaching teens and adults slang and idioms in a variety of languages. In 1999, David became known as Slangman to an audience of over 250 million people in 120 countries due to his regular 6-year segment on Voice of America (VOA), the broadcast network of the United States government. Currently, David has fused all of his language, musical, and performing talents together to create HEY WORDY!, a children's TV show, which introduces children ages 3+ to the world of foreign languages and cultures in an environment of music, animation, and magic.
