before purchasing it in order to gauge whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Civis Romanus: A Reader for the First Two Years of Latin (Latin Edition):

translation, just like reading an English text. This is one of the easier ones. I found myself pausing over some sentences for translation after I hit the mid point of the book, which means that the next time that I read it, the whole book will be without translation. It is an easy book for any 1st or 2nd yr student to keep their skills up during a summer break. 7 of 9 people found the following review helpful. Practice makes perfect with Latin reading skills By nymphamarina Practice reading in Latin while diving into the private and public life of ancient Rome. This reader is a compilation of Latin pieces on topics that first and second year Latin students will find appealing - such as Roman legends, historical figures, famous events, and daily life in ancient Rome - and can be used in conjunction with any textbook series. The table of contents offers not only a list of readings, but outlines what grammar the student should know before attempting to read the passage with confidence and ease. These readings can serve as a contextual grammar review as well as the basis for a paralinguistic lesson. The readings increase in length and difficulty as the student progresses; new grammar is included on odd-numbered pages only so students with high ability or aptitude and teachers who so desire may advance more rapidly by skipping the even numbered pages. 1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. very pleased By pbwmom4 This is just what I needed to have additional sources for students I tutor.

Civis Romanus is a graded Latin reader for beginning Latin students. The memorable stories that grew from the civilization of ancient Rome are the basis of the Latin passages in this unique reader. New grammar is assumed in odd-numbered passages only and thus the teacher who wishes to proceed more quickly through the text may skip the even-numbered readings. In Civis Romanus students read about actual people and events while honing their Latin grammatical and syntactical skills and increasing their Latin vocabulary. . Students who finish this reader in beginning Latin (Latin 1 and 2 at the high school level) will have acquired a minimum vocabulary of 1,000 words.
