I've got the LSAT Kaplan book, which is the one that I'm really using to study. I also have a copy of Kaplan's 180 book, however that is for use in the future. I own a copy of the 10 Prep Tests, that book is very stright forward in it's use. I also have this book put together by the people at Cliffnotes. I use this book for one purpose. I wanted a book that I could use just to use random test questions to solve. I'm going through the tests, but not under any test conditions. There are a handful of bad questions in this book, and as a serious study aid, it can't hold a candle to any of the other ones. But I suppose for my use, it's doing what I wanted.
