Carol Numrich : Consider the Issues (4th Edition) before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Consider the Issues (4th Edition):

4 of 4 people found the following review helpful. Ripped Off By Nelson Malavenda My first purchase of this series was Face the Issues, published years ago. It worked well with ESL classes. So, I recently spent quite a bit of money to purchase both Consider the Issues and Raise the Issues. The formats have changed for each NPR interview, and I notice that students do not feel as enthusiastic with either the topics or the sections dealing with details and main ideas. However, my main concern is that book and cd are sold separately, and that the publisher no longer includes the audio script in the book. In fact, to date, I have been unable to acquire audio scripts. They are supposed to be available on the publisher's website, but you have to have a "password", which is only available, according to the website, if you are a student purchasing the book in the "university bookstore." Wouldn't it have been nice if the publisher had been a little more conscientious about giving us all of the product, instead of piecemealing it for extra profit? Consider the Issues helps high-intermediate and advanced students develop critical thinking skills as they gain insight into American attitudes and values. Each thought-provoking unit is based on an authentic radio broadcast from NPR . Students develop essential listening strategies, such as predicting, looking at language, understanding main ideas and points of view, focusing on details, and making inferences. Language and concepts are integrated through follow-up critical thinking activities including discussion, debate, values clarification, survey, role play, case study, interview, and simulation. The fourth edition features six new units on topical issues such as social network privacy, reasons people choose not to marry, and bad driver behavior. In addition, each unit features integrated focus on language and pronunciation activities, as well as new discourse analysis activities.
