From Barbara Budrich Publishers : Economic Competence and Financial Literacy of Young Adults: Status and Challenges (Research in Vocational Education) before purchasing it in order to gauge whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Economic Competence and Financial Literacy of Young Adults: Status and Challenges (Research in Vocational Education):

The authors take an intense look at the economic competence of young adults in European countries, especially those who have started an apprenticeship or taken up studies at a university. The economic competence of this group is of special interest because these young people are mostly for the first time in their lives responsible for managing their financial affairs on their own.

About the Author Eveline Wuttke is professor of economic education at Goethe University Frankfurt. Jrgen Seifried is chair of economic education at the University of Mannheim. Stephan Schumann is a professor in the department of economics at the University of Konstanz.
